Where is Federal Spending Today for Children?

Today, kids get a small piece of the pie. In 10 years, it will be even smaller.

As a percentage of GDP, ECE and care are predicted to decline by 2024.

Federal Grants for Early Childhood Education

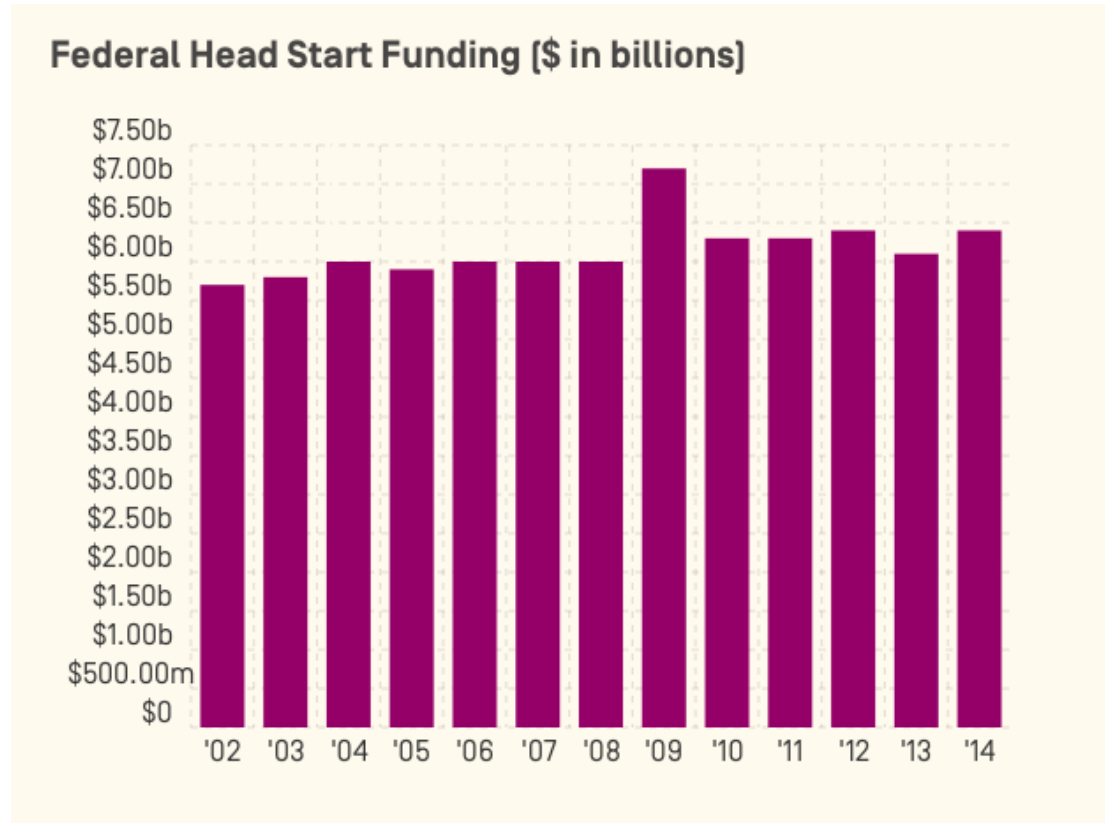

Funding for Pre-K from the Child Care and Development Fund (CCDF)

1. Grants are provided directly for families who need help paying for child care.
2. Families receive certificates to pay for public or private, religious or non-religious, center or home-based care.
3. CCDF also supports some ECE program and professional development.

Now is a good time for ECE nonprofits to build more connections to private revenue sources (foundations and corporate donors).

Children's successful transition is a foundation priority, reflected in its support for Stretch to Kindergarten, a spring-summer program of the Family Engagement Institute at Foothill College in Los Altos Hills that helps children without preschool exposure get ready for kindergarten.

Heising-Simons occasionally has a limited number of grants available for projects that address new interests of the foundation or that support college enrollment efforts by immigrant and disadvantaged youth. As with other education grants, however, direct service funding is limited to Santa Clara and San Mateo counties in California, while research, evaluation, and policy initiative funding is available more broadly. The foundation also offers support for organizations that are of personal interest or significance to individual board members, though these are limited to the counties of San Francisco, Santa Clara and San Mateo.

Heising-Simons does not accept unsolicited proposals or formal letters of inquiry, which can be a large barrier for new nonprofits or organizations that have not been funded in the past by the foundation. However, the funder's door is open to general inquiries and introductions.

Buffett Early Childhood Fund: Grants for Early Childhood Education

OVERVIEW: The majority of Buffett grants in early childhood education go to a few longtime grantees, and the fund has some pretty specific goals for supporting early childhood learning at the national level. It supports Educare, a network of early childhood learning centers, and a couple of policy groups and researchers.

IP TAKE: Buffett's early childhood grants flow to a select group of organizations. For first-time grantseekers, it's unlikely, if not impossible, that you'll earn a grant from the Buffett Early Childhood Fund unless you're based in Nebraska, where the foundation has some robust local programs.

PROFILE: In its 2013 annual report, the Buffett Early Childhood Fund says it has invested $150 million in early childhood programs, as well as policy advocacy for ECE, since its founding in 2005. Along with other big funders of early education, such as Kellogg and Gates, Buffett supports Educare and two policy initiatives: the Alliance for Early Success and the First Five Years Fund.

Buffett also grants money for academic research related to ECE. In 2013, for example, it gave $700,000 to Harvard's Center on the Developing Child, building on the past support the funder has given the center for research on the effects of living in poverty on younger children. Plus, for anyone who doubts the cost-effectiveness of investing in early childhood education, Buffett gave $250,000 to the University of Chicago's Economics Department for economic evidence to support the thesis that investing in ECE cuts costs for society at large.

Community Foundations Supporting Early Learning

Marin, San Francisco County, the Silicon Valley and the East Bay all have community foundations that support early learning. Here's a rundown of each foundation's early learning commitments:

Marin Community Foundation

Early education is a strategic initiative of the Marin Community Foundation, and in the North Bay, MCF is one of the most important funders of early ed. The foundation specifically supports early learning providers, extended learning programs and parental support groups that ensure students are ready to learn. MCF works with community partners to achieve these goals, and issues RFP invitations.

San Francisco Foundation

The SFF supports early learning in a couple of ways. First, the foundation promotes diversity in leadership and professional development in early education programs, and there's also a focus on providing support for best practices in early learning. Longtime grantees include the Little School and Raising a Reader, which are both established Bay Area groups. Each year, the foundation sponsors an open application process, and after the

ANNIE E. CASEY FOUNDATION

Traditionally, children's health and wellness has been a major focus of the Casey Foundation, but there's certainly grants for early childhood nonprofits, whether service providers, advocacy groups or reformers.

CHILD WELFARE FOUNDATION

The Child Welfare Foundation carries out a major part of the grantmaking efforts for the American Legion, and the focus of their giving is on education children and youth about a particular subject or nonprofit.

DANIELS FUND

Daniels Fund awards education grants for training, accountability, curriculum development, materials and even capital construction. The fund also supports programs that work toward engaging parents in their young child's education and development.

DEKKO FOUNDATION

Dekko's Early Childhood Development Program awards grants to organizations working with children ages birth to five. The foundation does have a few geographic restrictions.

ECOLAB FOUNDATION

Ecolab Foundation has a firm commitment to education—with early childhood education as a major focus area—so long as the programming occurs in an Ecolab community.

Last Year Was Big For Early Childhood Education Funding. What Lies Ahead for 2015?

✝ L.S. Hall

The past year saw major philanthropic organizations and national policymakers coalesce around a shared goal of expanded access and greater support for those critical early years in a child's education. The question going into 2015 is whether that momentum can be sustained.

The final weeks of 2014 brought some early holiday gifts for early childhood organizations and advocates. President Obama unveiled his Invest in US initiative, blending more than $1 billion in federal and philanthropic spending aimed at EC programs.

Funders supporting this effort include the LEGO Children's Foundation, the Walt Disney Co., the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, Chicago philanthropist J.B. Pritzker, the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, and the Kresge Foundation. Together, these funders put $330 million into Invest in US, complementing the $750 million in federal Education and Health and Human Services funding. The Lilly Endowment's approach to education funding is to raise the overall education level of Indiana residents. Consequently, most grants from the Lilly Endowment have focused on K-12 and higher education programs.

The foundation has given money for early childhood education in the past, occasionally in decent chunks. But it's only recently that this funder has come around to the notion that investment in early childhood education is a key way to reduce achievement gaps and prepare children for educational and workplace success later in life.

Welcome to the party that it seems everyone is attending these days.

The Lilly Endowment recently announced more than $22 million in grants to expand early learning opportunities across the Hoosier State. Lilly awarded a $20 million grant to Early Learning Indiana, enabling the organization to increase access and improve the quality of early childhood education programs statewide.

Currently, there is substantial activity in ECE grantmaking.

A New Foundation That Believes in the Power of Play for Kids

✚ Kiersten Marek

A new foundation is on the scene to help bolster funding for early childhood development. And what do they want little kids to do? Calculus in the cradle? Digital skills training in diapers? SAT prep in kindergarten?

Thankfully, no. The Caplan Foundation for Early Childhood has its priorities straight and knows a few things about how to support our littlest folk, and more academic pressure and testing is not what they are into. Play—physical, emotional, verbal—in early childhood is what this foundation is all about.

Gates: Focus on Pre-k for 3 and 4 year olds + Workforce

Areas of Focus

+ SHARE SECTION

We are committed to listening to and learning from the researchers, advocates, and early childhood leaders who have worked on these issues for many years. We aim to collaborate with a wide range of partners—including early childhood educators—to build on the work already underway and to identify opportunities in three key areas:

- Best Practice and Program Implementation. We support the development of tools for quality teaching and learning, and we support efforts to evaluate program implementation based on the essential elements of high-quality pre-K.
- National Policy and Advocacy. We work with a broad array of early learning advocates and coalitions, and we support high-quality pre-K at the state and federal levels.
- Program Implementation and Advocacy in Washington State. We invest in quality improvement in Head Start and the Early Childhood Education and Assistance Program (ECEAP), as well as in strengthening the connections between pre-K and the elementary grades to build on the gains from early learning.

TD Charitable Foundation

Our employees reside in the same communities we serve. We founded the TD Charitable Foundation in 2002 to give back to the people who are more than just customers to us. We want to support and help our neighbors.

Through the TD Charitable Foundation and the financial grants it makes, we partner with area non-profit and public institutions to create meaningful change and improvement in our communities. Coupled with the commitment of our employees and the thousands of volunteer hours they donate each year, this makes a significant impact in the communities in which we live and do business. It's a tradition we hold dear. We look forward to many more years of community involvement and responsible corporate citizenship.

PNC Foundation: Grants for Early Childhood Education

OVERVIEW: The PNC Foundation started its Grow Up Great initiative in 2004, committing an initial $350 million. The initiative has given out $90 million in grants. This program is where early childhood fundraisers should focus their attention, as it drives all of the foundation's grants in the area.

IP TAKE: Since starting Grow Up Great in 2004, PNC has developed many longtime grantees, and these relationships can make it difficult for first-time grantseekers to gain funding. The key to a winning proposal, though, is to align closely with Grow Up Great subprograms — which leaves the door open to a lot of different projects.

PROFILE: When you check out PNC's Grow Up Great initiative, you'll understand quickly that the foundation is serious about early childhood education. Here's the skinny on the Grow Up Great program: It has a heavy focus on multilingual programs, those involving arts and culture, and increasing parental engagement.

Apply for a Grant

The Caplan Foundation for Early Childhood has a two-step funding application process that includes both a letter of inquiry (LOI) and a full proposal. We invite full proposals only after reviewing letters of inquiry. We only fund programs that fit our program guidelines.

Letters of Inquiry will be accepted through July 31, 2015 for funding in 2015. Letters of Inquiry will be accepted again from October 1, 2015 through December 31, 2015 for 2016 funding. Applicants must submit letters of inquiry through the contact form that appears when clicking the Submit Your Application button below. Once a letter of inquiry is received by the Foundation, the Trustees will determine if the proposed program fits the Foundation's funding guidelines. The Trustees will respond to letters of inquiry within 60 days. Successful applicants will be invited via email to submit full proposals.

POLL #3

Tips for Grant Proposal Writing

Identify the domains of child development that your proposal is addressing.

the seven domains of early-childhood development

Example: Singing to improve 3 domains of development.

If your program is going to provide singing and music education for preschoolers, which development domains are being addressed?

1. Show how singing impacts multiple domains of development.
2. A skill such as singing combines cognitive, social and emotional, and language development.
3. Find ways to identify and track outcomes in each domain.

Clear and Simple Objectives are a Key Selling Point.

1. Prioritize most important objective by putting it first.
2. Tell what are you going to do and when are you going to do it.
3. Tell how you will evaluate your effectiveness and what instruments you will use.
4. Consider providing a timeline with your objectives mapped out.

Engage the Community in your grant proposal.

1. Ask for parent testimonials from successful interventions that you plan to scale.
2. Use voices of children who have experienced gains from specific interventions.
3. Ask community leaders who have been involved with the program to describe its benefits.
